Ryan Bray is a senior manager in the Bader Martin tax practice and a member of the firm's trusts and estates practice and its high net worth practice.

Ryan advises affluent individuals and families and their family businesses on income and estate tax matters. His clients include investors, business owners and company executives.

Ryan's work integrates complex wealth transfer strategies with the day-to-day operations of family-owned and closely held companies. He helps clients with estate tax-saving ideas that move seamlessly from drawing board to implementation, while ensuring that the solutions actually align with his clients' personal goals and philosophies.

He also advises fiduciaries on estate administration, post-mortem tax planning and trust funding.
